

TOUCH

The way something feels is called its texture.

Some things have a different texture on the outside from that on the inside.

You can feel things when you touch them because we have special touch detectors in our skin. These are very small and are hidden in your skin.

To see the touch detectors you need a very strong microscope.