CHAPTER 1 Andi's family

Hi, I'm Friday! And I'm a dog. I'm waiting for my owners, Andi and Bruce. Hmm ... this is boring and I'm hungry. Hey, I smell sausages! Who's eating sausages? I'm going to follow that smell. Maybe today is my lucky day ...

Andi walked into the shop. There were lots of people inside. People took things there to sell. Andi had a box with a picture of a mobile phone on it. She looked at the picture and smiled. There wasn't a phone inside the box. There were just some stones!

Andi smiled at the shop owner. She had big, beautiful eyes and dark hair.

'Do you buy phones? This is new,' she said. The shop owner looked at her. 'How old are you?' 'Eighteen,' Andi said.

The shop owner said nothing. He didn't believe her. 'Oh. OK ... I'm sixteen.' 'No, thanks,' he said.

Andi walked out sadly. Another man from the shop followed her. 'Wait!' he said. He looked at the box. It was a good phone. 'Here's twenty dollars.' He gave her the money. Andi gave him the box and ran.

She found Bruce at the corner of the street.

'Did you sell it?' he asked.

'Yes - for twenty dollars!' Andi smiled.

'Twenty dollars for some stones in a box!' Bruce was happy.

'And now we've got money for Friday's food!' Andi said.

'Friday!' called Bruce happily. 'Where were you?' He gave Friday a big hug. 'Here, boy,' he said. 'Burgers!' Friday ate the burgers very quickly.

Andi laughed. 'He's always hungry!' Suddenly she looked up. 'Oh no!' she said quietly. There was a policeman in front of them. The man from the shop was with him. He looked very angry.

'I can't believe it! Not again!' Bernie drove Andi and Bruce from the police station to Carl and Lois's flat. 'Do this again and you leave Carl and Lois!'

Andi laughed. 'Great!'

'No,' said Bernie, 'it's not great. I can't keep you together again. That's five families in three years.'

Andi and Bruce were quiet. They were brother and sister. They wanted to stay together. But they wanted a new home. They wanted a family for Friday too.

Andi and Bruce stopped outside the door of the flat. The music was terrible. Carl and Lois were in a band. Carl played guitar and Lois was the singer. But she didn't sing – she shouted to the music. Cats were better singers!

Andi looked at Bruce and pushed open the door.

'You're late!' shouted Lois. Her hair was very yellow and her eyes were very black. She wanted to be a pop star and she tried to look young. Carl wanted to be a star too. He had long, dirty hair and a stupid smile.

Lois started to shout to the music again. Andi and Bruce ran to the bedroom and closed the door.

'Wow!' said Bruce. 'They're worse than before. Is that possible?'

There was a little bark. Friday was outside the window. During the day, the little dog lived outside. At night, he stayed in the bedroom. Tonight they were all tired. Bruce went to sleep quickly. Friday was in his arms. Andi watched them. The little dog looked at her. There was a lot of love in his eyes. Next to Bruce's bed, there was a photograph of their mum and dad. Andi looked at the photograph. She was very sad. She wanted to keep her little family together – her, Bruce and Friday. But it was so difficult.

'What are we going to do?' she asked quietly in the dark.
