Millions of people visit the Grand Canyon each year.

Some stay in campgrounds, while others stay
at lodges in the national park.

Many people drive along the scenic roads
and stop at the lookouts.

The Grand Canyon was made into a national monument in 1908.

This meant that the canyon,
and the magnificent area around it,
would be protected from damage by people.

In 1869, explorer John Wesley Powell travelled on a small boat through the canyon.

He named it the Grand Canyon,
and he also made the first map of the area.
