Roll up, roll up

Imagine that you are part of the organisation committee for the school fête. You have been put into a small group and have been given the task of advertising the fête. Choose one of the following tasks to complete.

Flyer

Design a fold-out flyer to promote the school fête.

You must include:

- the location;
- the date;
- the time;
- attractions;
- things to buy;
- pictures of rides or stalls.

Radio advertisement

You have been given a three-minute spot on the local radio station.

You have to present all the important information in any way that you think will attract the listeners' attention.

It could include a rap, a song or straight dialogue.

A newspaper advertisement

You are allowed one full-page spread in the newspaper to advertise the fête.

Think about the design that will most appeal to readers. You should use colour, pictures, headings and include all the important details.

Pronoun referencing

Use a red pen or pencil to circle all the pronouns that refer to Mrs Cesinski and a blue pen or pencil to circle those that refer to Jon in the following text.

Mrs Cesinski smiled when she opened the door. 'Hello, Jon!' she said.
 'What can I do for you, dear?'

I explained what we were doing.

Mrs Cesinski looked worried. She thought for a moment. 'I remember getting the flyer,' she said. 'But I don't know ... I would like to give you something, but I don't think I have anything ...'

Then her face cleared. She reached up and took something off the row of pegs in the hall. She held it out to me. It was a cardigan; a man's cardigan. It was very well worn and a bit out of shape.

'Will this do?' she said.

'Thank you,' I said politely. 'Thank you very much.'

Say what you think!

What could these characters possibly be thinking?

Use the thought bubbles to show what each of these characters is thinking at this point in time.
